The main content of the page is a tutorial for using Emacs. It includes instructions on how to create a file named `rensyu.txt` and how to use the `cat` command to view its contents. A specific paragraph of text is highlighted in blue, and a context menu is open over it, with the "コピー" (Copy) option selected. The text in the highlighted area is: "One of the most primordial questions is 'Why is this planet to be the Earth?' In order to answer this fundamental question, people in the Department of Planetology in the Kobe University are aiming at comprehensive understanding of the evolution of the Earth, planetary and solar systems. The method of our research includes theoretical analysis, observations, laboratory experiments, and computer simulations. By making full use of these methods, various processes occurring at spaces from the center of the Earth to the edge of the solar system are investigated."

To the right of the Safari window, a text editor window titled "test.txt" is open, showing a blank document. The status bar at the bottom of the text editor indicates "E:---- test.txt All L1 (Text) (New file)".
